Comments I purchased a pair of "30" boots in January to replace another pair that were too small for my foot. I thought they were a good size at first. I had to cut the boot a little short as the heel was a little high. When I got home I wore them once. It wasn't until I could no longer walk that I realized how uncomfortable they were. I called the Brown Shoe Company and they said the model had changed. They told me that they could order me a new pair but that they couldn't guarantee the same fit or comfort. I then tried several other models and styles, but the discomfort was the same. The Brown Shoe Company did not offer any refunds or exchanges. So, I took the boots back and returned them. I was told that I could not exchange them as they were not in stock. I couldn't exchange them as they were not defective, I was told. I got the feeling that the Brown Shoe Company didn't care about their customers, but made a quick buck off of me. The last time I called they said they would have them in a couple of days. I hope that they are not out of business and that I am not one of the people they didn't care about. i can't comment on the quality of the product or the service but i would like to point out that it is not just the '30' boot that has a problem. it is all the boots that are too short and/or too narrow. I would like to know if anyone has any similar experiences? I feel that if a consumer were to go to a store to purchase a product and the said product has a problem that the consumer would be entitled to a full refund on the purchase. I don't know if I'd call 82157476af
